

GEOLOCATION Journeys On! Residency

Susan Betts | Streaky Bay | South Australia

art + environment learning connections

about the artist

I am an Aboriginal artist living in Streaky Bay. I have been an artist for many years, mainly doing painting, prints, photography and poems. I have even started my own company Wiyana (Woman) Spirit, where I like to paint and design images which express my connection to culture (the Wirangu, Mirning and Kokatha people), country and spirit. I also run cultural painting workshops within the community and schools, with an intention to teach all about Aboriginal art, design and culture. I believe everyone can express love and light from their heart with art, which then can be passed on.

the importance of the environment

Our connection to Mother Earth is vital and important as it encompasses a spirit of oneness. All that live on her cannot survive without her and are part of her, as she will be forever part of us. What affects her, will affect us in return, so we need to protect her and her spirit.

"The enlightened beauty of love & art can bloom from within one's heart, extending, touching & healing everything it comes into contact with"

the eco art project and what it can achieve

I hope that we can achieve more community awareness through this environmental art residency project. To teach those that have no awareness to become more aware of the environment around them and their connection to it. To gain knowledge and awaken the minds of our elders and children through this community engagement, so that they can access and unlock their wisdom on it. It is all about talking and passing on that knowledge for future generations.
